The ideal is now accepted by school officials and the public that an adequate, attractive plant should be provided for the high school. 3. Courses: A minimum amount of work is required of all of the high schools in English, history, science, and mathematics. When this minimum has been covered, the high schools are at liberty to elect the remaining subjects required to complete the course. The data herein submitted show that the different high schools are endeavoring to offer courses that will meet the needs of the students pursuing them. The list embraces such items as Latin and French, commercial subjects, shopwork, home economy, agriculture, etc. 4. High School Attendance: The high school classes are still too small by half, yet every year the high schools are making a stronger appeal to children, resulting in a healthy increase in the attendance. The number enrolling...
